Following thorough instructions, all participants take part in qualifying runs. All participants are instructed as a group and get to know the track and the karts together. Every single lap is then clocked by the automatic time measuring system, which also determines the best lap time. After the qualifying runs, the drivers are divided into racing groups according to their lap times; fast and slower drivers are mixed so as to form homogenous groups. This is followed by an explanation of the procedures of the Team Kart Grand Prix. The teams and drivers are introduced and each team appoints a team leader. The teams then decide on their strategies for the race. In order to change drivers, a driver has to make a pit stop and hand the kart over to the next driver as fast as possible.
